MARKETING CALIFORNIA AND ARIZONA CITRUS

1980-81 SEASON

O R A N G E S

The Crop Reporting Board estimated the 1980-1981 production totaled 245.6 million field boxes (10.5 million tons) 10% less than the 1979-80 season. Production of California Navels and Valencias and Florida Valencias accounted for the decline. Individual state total production of all varieties expressed in percent of the total was: Arizona 1%, California 27%, Florida 70%, and Texas 2%.

The California-Arizona Administrative Committee tabulation of the individual district utilization by variety expressed in units of 1,000 shipping cartons totaled: Central California 69,248 navels, 26,340 valencias; Southern California 7,123 navels, 26,502 valencias; Arizona-California Desert Valleys 1,220 navels, 4,008 valencias; Northern California 863 navels. The category usage distribution expressed in percent of the total was: navels 56% in fresh form to domestic markets, 8% in fresh form to foreign markets, 36% in processed or other products; valencias 31% in fresh form to domestic markets, 18% in fresh form to foreign markets, 51% in processed or other products.

The weather pattern was fairly good for fruit production. Temperatures were generally mild to above normal throughout the season. Little, if any, fruit was damaged by low temperatures, but the above normal temperatures produced smaller than normal sizes and above normal grade defects in the form of checks and creasing. Rainfall was below normal throughout the season and combined with the warm temperatures produced the heavy set of oranges, that did size well as normal.

L E M O N S

The Crop Reporting Board estimated the total 1980-81 crop production to be 31.8 million boxes (1.2 million tons), 53% more than the 1979-80 season. Arizona production was more than double the previous season's output and represented 22% of the total production. California production was higher than the preceding crop year and amounted to 78% of this season's production.

The California-Arizona Lemon Administrative Committee tabulations of the individual district utilization expressed in units of 1,000 shipping cartons totaled: Central California 8,786; Southern California 34,908; Arizona & California Desert Valleys 19,877. The category usage distribution expressed in percent of the total was: 21% in fresh form to domestic markets, 15% in fresh form to foreign markets, 64% in processed or other products.

Favorable growing weather prevailed most of the season. Above normal temperatures and below rainfall occurred much of the season. Excessive heat and high winds occurred in some areas, but were not responsible for any significant production losses.

G R A P E F R U I T

The Crop Reporting Board estimated the 1980-81 production totaled 67.9 million field boxes (2.8 million tons), 7% less than the 1979-80 season. Production was lower in all areas except California, which had a slight increase. Individual state production expressed in percent of the total was: Arizona 4%, California 12%, Florida 74%, and Texas 10%.

The California Administrative Committee tabulation of the Coachella Valley District utilization expressed in units of 1,000 shipping cartons was 8,502. The category usage distribution expressed in percent of the total was: 40% in fresh form to domestic markets, 14% in fresh form to foreign markets, 46% in processed or other products.

Favorable growing and harvesting conditions prevailed most of the season. Little or no loss of production was attributed to adverse weather conditions.
