U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
BUREAU OF PLANT INDUSTRY,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF,
Washington, D. C., August 3, 1904.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit and to recommend for publication as a Farmers' Bulletin the manuscript of a paper embracing lists of fruits adapted to the various sections of the United States. These lists have been compiled by Mr. W. H. Ragan, Expert in Pomological Nomenclature, from Bulletin No. 8, Division of Pomology, under the direction of G. B. Brackett, Pomologist of this Bureau.

Very respectfully,

B. T. GALLOWAY, Chief of Bureau.

VARIETIES OF FRUITS RECOMMENDED FOR PLANTING.

INTRODUCTION.

An increasing demand for the information contained in Bulletin No. 8 of the Division of Pomology^a makes desirable the publication of its essential features in greatly simplified form, for general distribution as a Farmers' Bulletin.

Bulletin No. 8 was prepared by the American Pomological Society's committee on the revision of its Catalogue of Fruits, and was adopted by the society as its recommended list. It was then published by the Department of Agriculture. The data forming the basis of that bulletin were carefully gathered from practical fruit growers throughout the country. It may therefore be accepted as containing approximately correct and trustworthy lists of fruits adapted to the various districts into which the country has been divided. The lists in the present bulletin are compiled from those in Bulletin No. 8, with such modifications as longer experience has rendered necessary.

Fruit districts.—There are 19 fruit districts (see fig. 1), outlined as nearly as possible with reference to elevation, soils, and climatic conditions. Their great size, however, prevents anything like absolute uniformity in these conditions throughout any district. Hence, a variety of fruit that is recommended for a certain district may not succeed in all portions of the district, and the grower is advised to secure counsel from all available local sources before proceeding in the important matter of planting.

Explanation of terms.—The present bulletin is arranged by districts. Under each district its boundaries and general characteristics are first stated. Then follows a complete list of fruits recommended for planting in the district. It should be borne in mind that these recommendations are not made by the compiler, nor by the Department of Agriculture, but by a large number of practical fruit growers in each district, whose reports are based on their personal experience and observation. The varieties of each fruit are divided into three classes. Those varieties reported by growers as highly successful are placed under the head "highly recommended;" those reported as having proved ordinarily successful are "recommended;" while those whose success has not yet been demonstrated, but which are considered promising, are "recommended for trial." Of course these ratings are not to be considered as infallible. Indeed, no list could be given by which the planter can always be guided; but the experience of others in a given district, with similar soils and climatic conditions, will usually prove of value to the beginner.

It is the policy of the American Pomological Society to secure, so far as practicable, the adoption of names consisting of single words; also to secure for each variety the popular use of the same name in all parts of the country. In these lists parts of some names are printed in italics, which indicates that these names are eventually to be shortened by dropping the italicized parts. Where the italicized part is set off by a comma, it is the first part of the name; for instance, the varieties of peach known as General Lee and Lady Ingold are printed Lee, General, and Ingold, Lady. In some cases names are followed by others printed in italics and inclosed in parentheses. These are cases in which two or more names for one variety are in somewhat general use. The names thrown into parentheses are considered the less desirable ones and their use is to be discouraged.

No attempt is made to indicate the character of the varieties listed, except in a general way by the use of the words "dessert," "kitchen," "market," "cider," etc., singly or in combination. The term "dessert" when applied to a variety signifies that it is desirable for eating in a fresh or uncooked state. A variety recommended for the "kitchen" has good cooking qualities. A "market" variety is a good bearer, of fine appearance, and possesses the firmness and keeping quality necessary to stand shipment well. Of course such a variety must have qualities which make it more or less desirable for use by consumers; but as a rule the best "market" varieties seldom if ever are of the best quality as "dessert" or "kitchen" fruits. The other terms used, such as "cider," "wine," and "raisin," explain themselves.

DISTRICT NO. 4.

Pennsylvania above 500 feet elevation and south of latitude 41°; Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, and Alabama, above 500 feet elevation; West Virginia; Kentucky; Tennessee; Ohio and Indiana south of latitude 40°; southern Illinois below the general elevation of 500 feet, from the Wabash to the Mississippi; Missouri south of a line from near St. Louis and along the elevation of 1,000 feet to the southeast corner of Kansas; Oklahoma below 2,000 feet elevation; Indian Territory; and Arkansas north of latitude 35° and also south of it wherever the elevation exceeds 500 feet. The Allegheny and the Ozark mountains, the valleys of the Ohio, the Tennessee, and the Cumberland, and portions of the Wabash, the Mississippi, and the Arkansas rivers are embraced within this district. Portions of it are noted fruit regions, while throughout its vast territory the hardier deciduous fruits flourish. Many of the varieties recommended succeed best in certain localities within the district. An exception to the general character of the district occurs in those portions of Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, and southeastern Missouri lying near the Mississippi River, where the varieties adapted to culture in Districts Nos. 5 and 7 generally succeed.

DISTRICT NO. 14.

The Dakotas west of longitude 99°; Wyoming; Montana east of longitude 111°; and the British Provinces lying between longitude 99° and 111°. The upper Missouri and the Yellowstone valleys are the distinctive features of the district. There is perhaps no section of the district in which fruit growing has reached a very high state of development. Leading causes of this condition may be found in the comparatively undeveloped or unsettled state of the country and its great elevation.
